The image on the left is my final piece for photographics. I used three photos to compose this photo. I chose two out of the three photos that featured texture – in hopes that this would contribute to the dynamic of my final idea and my third photo as a center piece. I wanted to bring together these photos to create distorted composition, I did this by blending my images into a swirl like shape to create this illusion looking piece. I did create three other images that will feature on Myblog however I wasn't satisfied with my outcomes and therefore decided to not have it for my final ideas. Although I was able to experiment with Photoshop through the previous images I made which led to my successful outcome. This week proved to be slightly challenging since I've had no experience prior to this therefore it wasn't the easiest to produce a piece like this, I used some basic knowledge I picked up from a few videos however hope to expand my knowledge on Photoshop.
